THE BRIDE STILL CONCEALS HERSELF FROM VISITORS.

he Has Got the Opinion of Three Judges, Who Agree That the Signing of the First Contract Constituted Mrrriage - Her Mother Consents to Talk a Little-Mor-Plannin All Astir Over the Story.

The fluttering hearts of ex-Minister Harry F. Auld and his newly-made wife, Mrs. ma Christie-Auld, are still as far apart as ever. All the parties concerned in the case re as clouse-mouthed as clams, and very little information can be gleaned.

An Evening World reporter caught Mrs. Cooke, mother of the fair bride, as she was tarting on a marketing tour this morning. He asked whether she would say anything egarding the case. She replied:

"I have nothing to say. My daughter is legally married and has been twice to Mr. Auld. The stories to the effect that she had some hold on Mr. Auld are false. He simply wanted to back down from his promise and she wouldn't let him. That's all there is to it."

"But how is it they don't live together?" queried the reporter.

"I refuse to say. Now go away and don't bother me. I won't tell you anything more."

"Did Mr. Auld have anything to do with the management of Mrs. Christie's estate?" persisted the reporter.

"That report is not true. He never managed any of her property. There, I'm done," and she walked away.

The reporter followed, but not another word would she say.

Mrs. Christie is still living in seclusion and will not be seen.

A pert maid politely shut the door in the reporter's face when he asked to see Mr. Auld.

He knew very little about the affair. He was asked by Mrs. Christie to witness her wedding to Mr. Auld. When he expressed his surprise she laughed and said:

"He's engaged to me, but he doesn't want to come to terms. But I think he will," she added, with another laugh.

Miss Winoma Garrison, another of the witnesses, was not at home when the reporter called. Her mother, a pleasant lady, answered the ring and a few of the reporter's questions. reporter's questions.
"It is not true," she said, "that my daughter had anything to do with forcing Mr. Auld to marry. She was simply asked to be a witness, and consented."

Do you know anything of the inside his-

"I do not. I do know that they were legally married about eighteen months ago."
"By the contract?"
"Yes, and in the opinion of three leading judges in the city," she answered.
"The Evening Womin," she continued, had the conrect story yesterday afternoon. Buy it and you will know all about it."
"Thanks." replied the reporter.
Then the door was gently closed, and the conversation thus ended.
The affair has created great excitement among Morrisania people, and it is the theme of every conversation. It is not known what legal steps Mrs. Auld intends to take, but should there be any the whole story will come out.

But John J. O'Brien doesn't care, and his reason for treating the action of the G. O. P.'s County Committee with contemptis found in the speech of his liqutenant, ex-Assemblyman John E. Brodsky, delivered in defence of the Eighth Assembly District organization last-night. Mr. Brodsky said:

"You can disband the organization in the Eighth, but you cannot keep O'Brien of the new County Committee if he elects to come in."

A grominent Liepublican in an interview with an Evenine Wealth Peporter this morning throws an entrely new light on the action of the Republican County Committee, and confidently asserts that the managers were insincere in their disciplining of the Eighth District organization. He said:

"The whole thing is a farce and has been played for a purpose. There are 20,000 or more than once in four years, and then on the toccasion of a Presidential election.

"John J. O'Brien has been the bingsboo of these non-veters, and the Republican leaders conceived the happy idea of making a pretense to ric themselves of him and his machine to make them active participants in local elections and possible to gather in a few of the ultra-pursits in the Democratic ranks.

"Johnny O'Brien understands this just as well as they do, and when the next Election Day comes round he will be found controlling the Republican machine in the Eighth Assembly District and handling the boodle as before."

BRODIE AND GABIG'S ARREST.

Taken to Albany to Be Tried for Arranging the Prize-Fight.

A RETRACTION IN ORDER.

Itself of Journalistic Discourtesy.

Our venerable contemporary, the Commercia EVENING WORLD'S statement that it was the first paper to appear on the street with the President's paper to appear on the street with the President's message on Monday last, and by implication to claim that honer for itself.

"Tell the truth" is The Evening World's motto when speaking of itself, as well as on other matters. Now, what are the facts in this case? The presses of The Evening World, with the editions containing the President's message, started at precisely 1.42 p. m., Monday, Dec. 3. The paper was out upon the street immediately, a release having been received from Washington. This is a fact of record.

An Evening World reporter called at the business office of the Commercial Advertiser this morning.

"What time does the first edition of the Commercial Advertiser appear?" he asked.

"At 2 o'clock," said the clerk.

This was about eighteen minutes behind The

Why not?" asked the reporter. "Because he received too many visitors and talked too much yesterday. In conse quence he was feverish and restless and un-

The man had jumped from the roof of the five-story building, and the jump was his second step, within a few hours, looking to self-destruction.

For the first he had taken poison, which failed to accomplish quickly enough the end be sought.

Burkhardsmaler was thirty-three years old he sought.

Burkhardsmaier was thirty-three years old and was formerly a cook at the Atlantic Garden. He lately purchased a saloon in the building from which he jumped to his death, paying $800 for the property. It proved a poor investment, and on finding that he had been duped out of his money he became first despondent and then deranged.

Burkhardsmaier opened his saloon as usual this morning, but shortly before his leap from the roof he asked a friend to tend bar, and he went upstairs.

While he lay in the bed suffering from the effects of the poison he had taken his wife went below to assist the friend in the saloon at his request, but mistrusting something wrong spe sent for her sister, who lives at 232 Eldridge street, who came at once to her brother-in-law's bedside.

He seemed to be in a dazed condition, and muttered that he must die soon. Then he raved wildly and said that he was going to leave the world.

The sister went downstairs to call his wife, and she had no sooner left the room than the half-dressed man sprang from the bed and made for the door.

At the time the only other occupant of the room was little Konra', the six-year-old son, who ran after his father and told him to come back. Then, as Burkhardsmaier started to go upstairs, the boy yelled for his mother and began to laboriously climb the steps his father had taken.

Hearing the cry of the child, the mother came out of the saloon just in time to see her husband on the landling of the third floor and the six-year-old boy half way up, crying out in his shrill tones and struggling hard to catch his father.

Once the man half hesitated, looked back and seemed about to return to the two pair of arms stretched out to him from the floor below.

Then, suddenly, he faced about and started on, while the woman increased her stairs leading from the third to the fourth floor.

It was evident that the man was making for the roof, for he ascended the steps which led to the souttle. The difficulty with which this was forced permitted Mrs. Burkhardsmaler and the little Kourad to almost catch up, and the woman was just placing her foot on the last flight of steps when the fastening of the scuttle gave way, and an instant later the man was on the roof.

He paced up and down the roof, muttering, and occasionally looking over the edge into into the street until his pursuers were almost within reach, when, inclining his body toward the street, he deliberately allowed himself to fail, while the agenized wife mak helpless upon the roof.

A crowd quickly gathered about the place where the man's body had fallen, but the police were on hand, too, and the curious throng was kept back.

The crushed body was picked up and tenderly borne to the undertaking shop at 82 Stanton street.

Elevated Railroad Steps.

This morning Officer John J. Shannon, of the Twenty-seventh Precinct, saw a thin old man sitting on the steps of the L station at One Hundred and Fifth street and Second avenue, his head drooping forward and blood streaming his head drooping forward and blood streaming over his waistcoat and coat from a ghastly wound in his throat.

The man was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital on Seventieth street, where his wounds were dressed while he was under the influence of ether.

The old man was John Eichman, or Richter, of 180 Orchard street. He is a German and worked in a piano factory. He is sixty-one years old and lived in a poor little room, sparely furnished, in the cramped-up tenement-house. He had a sister who came to see him occasionally, and he rarely went out except to go to work in the morning at 7 o'clock and return in the evening at 6. Then he would cook himself something to eat or go out to one of the cheap hash-houses in the neighborhood.

He seldom spoke to any one, as he drooped along, bent and shrivelled with his sixty-one years. Without being melancholy, he was generally very quict, and at times downcast.

He made a bad gash in his throat, and his stomach was wounded, as well as his left wrist, with a razor when found this morning.

At the hospital the Superintendent said it was impossible to tell yet whether the old man would die of not.

A LIBEL APPRAISED AT $5,000.

Walter G. Schuyler Sues Secretary Hughes, of the M. A. C., for that Amount.

C. C. Hughes, the Secretary of the Manhattan Athletic Club, is under $1,000 bail on account of the suit for $5,000 damages for libel instituted in the Superior Court against Mr. Hughes by Walter G. Schuyler, the well-known club man and patron of sports.

In the November number of the Manhattan Club Chronicis there appeared an article which criticised most severely Mr. Schuyler's decision while acting as judge in the amateur athletic contests at Detroit last month.

In the 120-yard hurdle race Mr. Schuyler declared J. Jordan, a N. Y. A. C. man, a victor over Copiand, one of Manhattan's followers.

In the Chronicis article, for which Mr. Schuyler holds Mr. Hughes responsible, it was stated that Jordan had finished the race a foot behind Copiand and Mr. Schuyler is characterized as being "notoriously unfit for any position in athletics where the requisites are hone-sty and capability." The article also refers to him as "our idiotic and incompetent friend."

The article has created much comment in athletic circles, and Mr. Schuyler took legal steps immediately against Mr. Hughes.

THOSE CHARGES AGAINST TRUSTER EHLERS

He Talked Freely to Some Other Trustees, and Told Them a Story or Two, and Now They Have Gone Back on Him-The Case Is Not a Bit Like the Soulard

Scandal-What Mr. Ehlers Says THE EVENING WORLD presents to its readers to-day the sum and substance of the seri-School Trustee E. M. I. Ehlers, of the Ninth Ward, about which the School Commissioners were so very secret yesterday.

Col. Ehlers and his fellow-Commissione Dr. McNamara and Mr. Seaman, who constitute the majority in the Ninth Ward Board of Trustees had been duly and thoroughly investigated by the By-Law Committee of the Board of Education on an indictment containing twelve counts, and the Com had disagreed as to what their report Chairman Schmidt and Commissioners G

"Your case does not resemble the Soulard case, then?"

"No, d—n it! There! I say a spade is a spade, you see. Not at all like that case. No liaison here. The charges preferred by Benedict and Tinsdale against all three of us were neglect of duty and inefficiency.

"There were no specifications. The counts were made from the evidence afterwards taken.

The trouble grew out of the trial of Miss. Pope, Principal of No. 3 female department, We supported her against Trustee Tinsdale. We were a majority. Miss Pope was fined finally by the Board of Education.

"Four counts are still charged against you personally, what are they?" asked the reporter.

Col. Ehler laughed again and produced a document. It was his indictment.

"I am charged with having behaved improperly at Grammar School No. 3, male department, Christmas time, 1886. This is what I did. We were having the usual 'Christmas racket' and 6.0 or 700 boys and many parents were assembled in the school with horns, tin pans, clappers, squeaks and other noisy things.

"Principal Sutherland was in the habit of introducing me to the school with a flattering speech, and this time I came prepared for him." I AM SOMETHING OF A LIAB MYSELF.

"Then I am charged with haranguing the girls of No. 3 about their not being permitted to occupy the new annex to the building and advising them to go home and ask their parents to intercede for them with the Board of Education.

"Third, they say that I made use of vulgar and obscene language about a female teacher. Well, I don't lie. I tell the truth. I said to one of the Treatees in private conversation. 'Miss — is an o'd maid. She ought to get married. It would do her more good than anything else.'

"The last charge is that I have deported myself in a manner tending to bring discredit on the system and under this head the evidence allows that once in a group of Commissioners and Trustees discussing the then recept appointment of Miss Dodge and Miss. The first witness called was a bright young girl who had been employed seven years in feather-making houses. The request was made by all the girls that their names be not used by the reporters, for the reason that they would be blacklisted by the employers and therefore unable to obtain work.

Five of the young women who were employed in Lowenstein & Gray's testified that the reduction of wages amounted to an average of 32½ per cent. all around, and that when Mr. Loewenstein found that that they were about to join the Union, and refused to work for the prices paid, he told them to get out.

ADDIE STANTON'S LAWYER PROMISES A INTENSE INTEREST IN THE CLOSING SCENES OF THE MURDER TRIAL.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1888.

An Excited Crowd in the Brooklyn Sessions Court-The Wealthy Prisoner Calm and Composed Gen. Trucy Argues that the Killing of Young Nicholas Goldenkirch

The prisoner, Green, is unlike the major-

The question was: Was the killing justifiable or excusable?

If it was the result of a misfortune or an accident, it was excusable. Did the pistol go off in the struggle between the two men? If it did, then there must be an acquittal.

Green, he said, was in his own house with his family. He was defending himself against an intruder who had been warned not to come, It was a principle of the world that a man's house was his eastle, and even a king might not enter. It was his right to say who should enter. No man had a right to enter the house.

When Goldenkirch called that night he was warned away. He refused, and Green had the right to defend his home by any and all means. Goldenkirch was a trespasser who had been forbidden to enter, but in spite of this he forced his way into the bouse. Under these circumstances killing would be justifiable and proper.

After recess Assistant District-Attorney Clark made the closing address for the prosecution.

Hawkins is utterly reckless and plays checkers most of the time with his watchers. He says he does not care whether he is hanged or not.

He does not yet know that his visitors of last night were commissioners sent by Gov. Hill to ascertain whether he is really insane or not. The Commissioners came in an informal way and chatted with him just as many other visitors have done. Hawkins thought they were there out of curiosity and was entirely off his guard. His friends and counsel appealed to the Governor for a commutation of his sentence on the ground that he was insane, but the shrewd Executive sent the Commission there on the quiet to find out whether Hawkins really was insane.

Galvin Signs With Pittsburg. [SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.]
PITTEDURG, Dec. 6.—Galvin has signed for Chairman Schmidt and Commissioners Guggenheimer and Sprague, the majority of the Committee, thought enough had been proven to make it imperative that the three trustees should be asked to resign, and in the interests of the Ward and for harmony they thought the accusing minority of that Board of Trustees, Messrs. Benedict and Timadale, should also resign.

Commissioner Crary didn't, but he fatled to formulate his own opinion. Commissioner Holt, however, made a minority report in which he declared that even if all the alleged facts charged against the trustees were true, they constituted no offense sufficient to warrant the request for the resignations of the culprits.
